INVESTMENT COMMENTARY

SKAGEN Focus performed well in November, outperforming its benchmark in what turned out to be the strongest month year-to-date for global equity markets. The fund's performance was driven by positive developments within the portfolio and an overall indication that global inflation is cooling.

The biggest contribution to fund performance came from the overcapitalised Japanese small cap Pasona, which agreed to sell its stake in subsidiary Benefit One. The stake alone is worth more than its own entire market cap, at a 40% premium, allowing for improved capital allocation. Another strong performer during the month was our undervalued gold producer Fortuna Silver Mines which released results demonstrating the high return potential of its latest asset, in addition to an increasing gold price, which bodes well for future cash flow. On the negative side, our worst performer was German potash producer K+S, as market participants are worried about the weak pricing environment.

We took some profit in Pasona following strong performance and decreased our position in US cinema and hotel operator Marcus Corp, as we see better risk reward elsewhere.

We added to our position in Spanish automotive supplier Gestamp at attractive levels and initiated a new position in Doosan Bobcat during the month. Doosan Bobcat is one of the largest producers globally of construction and mining machinery and is currently trading at a vast discount to fair value, as the sentiment is pressured by the current cyclical slump in some of its end markets. We believe there is a substantial valuation upside to its normalised earnings power, which we also think will prove more resilient through the cycle than is currently priced in the shares.
