INVESTMENT COMMENTARY

A rude awakening

After several months of trading water, global equity markets were in for a rude awakening in the first quarter when yet another banking crisis caused tremors in the world of finance. More on this topic below. Elsewhere, commodity prices broadly declined and reached levels below those seen at the time of Russia's unprovoked and illegal invasion of Ukrainian territory. Other lesser-known global market news includes hyperinflation in Lebanon crippling the country, new guidelines requiring large Korean companies to submit corporate filings in English and the final regulatory approval of the merger between the railways Canadian Pacific and Kansas City Southern in North America. Canadian Pacific is a top-5 position in SKAGEN Global.

Performance

SKAGEN Global underperformed its benchmark index MSCI AC World in the first quarter but ended the period ahead of the benchmark measured over one year, five years and since inception.

Attribution

The fund's three best performers in the first quarter measured by absolute return were DSV, Microsoft and LVMH. We entered 2023 with large upside in these three names according to our proprietary analysis. Indeed, the market seems to have taken notice of their significant undervaluation. We believe that there is still substantial return potential in all three stocks and execution continues to be in-line with our (high) expectations.

The fund's three largest detractors in absolute terms were Dollar General, Nasdaq and Abbott Laboratories. The US discount retailer Dollar General likely retreated as a defensive name when the market advanced with enthusiasm. However, we remain firm believers in the long-term story and see the small temporary pullback as a buying opportunity. There was no major news behind the decline in Nasdaq or Abbott Laboratories.

Portfolio Activity

SKAGEN Global initiated a new position in Mainfreight, a mid-cap freight and logistics company based in New Zealand with operations worldwide. Established in 1978, Mainfreight remains a founder-led company that currently employs 10,000 people. It provides logistical services with a global customer base, though roughly 50% of the business comes from Australia and New Zealand. Mainfreight has a long track record of prudent and methodical expansion while fostering a corporate culture focused on quality and customer service. We see a well-run base business with significant embedded optionality at a very attractive price point for long-term investors.

As far as we know, this is the first time since SKAGEN Global's inception in 1997 that a New Zealand based company is joining the portfolio. It is thanks to the fund's unique and unconstrained investment mandate that we are able to scour the globe for under-researched stocks with the most compelling long-term risk-reward profiles. Increasing the fund's exposure to this region with a targeted investment also brings positive portfolio construction attributes, in our view.

The fund disposed of its last few remaining shares in the Swiss private equity firm Partners Group where fundamentals have deteriorated. We also substantially trimmed our holding in the French luxury goods producer Hermes as the stock reached new peak levels and stretched valuation beyond our appetite as pragmatic value investors.

Reflections and Outlook

There were several spectacular blow-ups in the banking sector in the quarter. Some observers may be shocked that these collapses could occur given the huge regulatory frameworks imposed on the banking sector in the wake of the financial crisis 15 year ago. However, we are not entirely surprised given the excess that has built up in the financial system after a decade of zero-level interest rates. Followers of SKAGEN Global will know that we have largely stayed away from the entire banking sector for several years as our internal analysis has clearly pointed to unfavourable fundamentals and outsized tail risk. The fund only owns one bank, JP Morgan, which we believe will be the winner of the current banking crisis.

This is a good time to highlight that every day a portfolio manager faces three decisions: buy, sell or do nothing. Each option requires thoughtful consideration and will impact future returns, but the two action-oriented decisions (buy, sell) typically garner the most attention.

SKAGEN Global employs an internally developed, highly customised investment process with dynamic feedback mechanisms where each investment that makes it into the fund has to pass through a fine mesh of detailed bottom-up analysis. We consistently assess, to various degrees, many different alternatives from a variety of sectors and geographies, but only in rare instances do they qualify for a position in the fund given the high entry requirements. To illustrate this process with an example, last summer we met with the executive team of the US regional bank First Republic, one of the banks caught up in the current banking turmoil. Our internal analysis quickly identified the stock as a no-go for SKAGEN Global as we deemed its risk profile unfavourable. This example highlights how we routinely search for new ideas with an open – but critical – mind. Most of the time this due diligence happens behind the scenes without commentary in fund reports; nevertheless, it comprises a key component of our work to secure, at all times, the best long-term investments for the fund.

SKAGEN Global is presently attractively valued with considerable upside for investors sharing our multi-year investment horizon.

Historical returns are no guarantee for future returns. Future returns will depend, inter alia, on market developments, the fund manager's skill, the fund's risk profile and management fees. The return may become negative as a result of negative price developments. There is a risk associated with investing in the fund due to market movements, currency developments, interest rate levels, economic, sector and company-specific conditions.

RISK PROFILE

We have classified this product as 5 out of 7, which is a medium-high risk class. This rates the potential losses from future performance at a medium-high level. Other risks not included in the summary risk indicator but materially relevant: Event risk, liquidity risk, operational risk, counterparty risk, derivatives risk. Be aware of currency risk. You will receive payments in a different currency, so the final return you will get depends on the exchange rate between the two currencies. This risk is not considered in the indicator shown above. This product does not include any protection from future market performance so you could lose some or all of your investment.
