

Performance Commentary

The positive start to the year came to an abrupt halt towards the end of January, as uncertainty around the speed of the vaccine rollout and concerns around COVID mutations took a toll on stock markets. SKAGEN Vekst experienced a similar development but with large variations at individual stock level. We saw strong performance from our global fertiliser company Yara, which benefitted from higher urea prices. Hyundai Motor was another strong performer, following reports of a potential tie-up and production of an Apple car. Bonheur had a weak start to the year as the delay in the reopening of the travel market will continue to put pressure on its cruise business. We initiated a new position in the digital service and software company TietoEVRY. We believe that the company's growing software business combined with synergies from its recent merger will lead to higher earnings growth and an uplift in the current low valuation. Despite the large stock market gains last year, we still see significant upside in several cyclical industries, particularly within the financial and materials sectors. Unlike the overall market, many companies within these sectors are still trading at very attractive valuations despite significant upside potential to earnings as the economy reopens.

The fund selects low-priced, high-quality companies in the Nordic region and from around the world.

The objective is to provide the best possible risk adjusted return.

The fund is suitable for those with at least a five year investment horizon.
